

Alumni in Peru share their Maxwell Experiences

Maxwell Alumni María Inés Vásquez, Gabriel Arrisueño (both MPA), Mayen Ugarte and Nuria Esparch (both MA in PA), hosted a panel on November 12th at Pontificia Universidad Católica del Perú (PUCP). Fifty undergraduate students from Political Science, Public Administration and Business Administration attended the event.

The Alumni talked about their personal experiences at Maxwell, as well as the ways the School changed the way they face challenges in their professional careers. Their conclusion was that while their undergraduate studies shaped their abilities to develop their career in Peru (the four of them are also PUCP alumni), Maxwell helped them to expand their skills and abilities further on, with a global flavor and a real-life approach.

Nuria explains it this way, “As we say in Peru, ‘there is nothing new under the sun’, but Maxwell taught us to walk the extra mile and check it out. We took the opportunity too to remember our personal story at School and the people we met. I think that our own enthusiasm was infectious”.
